Selecting the college best suited to you can be an overwhelming experience. With so many to choose from, offering such a rich array of options and programs, you may likely wonder where to start.

A good first step is to find out which colleges offer programs of study in your areas of interest. You can learn which programs are offered by Connecticut colleges and universities by searching the Office of Financial and Academic Affairs for Higher Education's academic program search:

www.ctohe.org/heweb/ProgramSearch.asp. To explore Connecticut colleges in depth and submit online applications, go to www.CTMentor.org.

Once you have narrowed your selection, the following questions may help further inform your decision. Many of these questions can be answered by visiting college websites. Others you may want to pose to a college representative while visiting a campus.
